

Self-Responsibility

The highest level of power a person can operate from is to take full responsibility for their life - the conditions, experiences and situations that they create.

At some level everyone knows that they create their reality and that their decisions/beliefs/assumptions determine their life, and that they can decide to determine differently, but not many people are currently ready to be that honest and responsible.

A very empowering exercise is to look back at your life and find the beliefs and decisions that you made that got you where you currently are - both the good situations and the bad.

In a society where everyone blames everyone else for problems that occur, how can true self-responsibility ever start to show up for humanity? It only takes a handful of people to start - as the great ones before us did - a movement toward more honesty, realness and self-responsibility, which will start resulting in an integration of consciousness that eventually will overcome all the ignorance in the world. Some of us are already moving quickly in that direction!
